Amphitheatre, The

"For this purpose I paid a visit to the mountain designated upon the Map as the Amphitheatre. It is the eastern portion of the Eldor Range and in form roughly approximates to that of a horseshoe. Below the capping of greenstone which forms its summit are horizontal layers of sandstone and shale, the contour of the outcrop of which receding in the centre and advancing on both sides gives rise to an appearance not dissimilar from that of an Amphitheatre and hence the name."

Auburn, settlement on Isis River 10 miles from Ross, derives its name from Boyles Bros. station at that place. Telephone authorities would not grant that name as a post office because of duplication. The local residents then obtained official approval for the name "Goldsmith" in remembrance of the poet who made famous that "Sweet Auburn, loveliest village of the Plain" in his Deserted Village

Ballahoo, now Tarleton (4.2.1933) Ballahoo named by Miss Moriarty after some favourite spot in Ireland 5.1.1933(3-4)

According to Webster's Dictionary Ballahoo is the name given to a fast sailing schooner used in the Bermudas and West Indies and from the fact that her Brother Capt Moriarty was a man of the sea it seems more likely that this is the derivation of the word.

Bass Straits,
named after Dr. George Bass suggested by Flinders to Governor Hunter

Moore Robinson 10

Bass's Strait,
"The extensive passage which separates VDL from New Holland was named Bass's Strait by governor Hunter. Mr. Bass had visited the north side of it in an open whaleboat, from Port Jackson in January, 1797; and the magnitude of the swell which he found rolling in from the southwestward, strongly indicated its origin to be from the southern Indian Ocean; and came so strong in confirmation of the former suppositions of an existing strait that His Excellency the governor thought proper to or-derme in a vessel to ascertain its certainty, by sailing through it. It was with pleasure that I was able to associate Mr. Bass in the expedition.."
